D. R. Fraser & Co. are fitting up the building lately used as a curling rink, for a lumber warehouse. The interior of the building will be used for storing fine and dressed lumber, while in the yard to the east will be piled timber and rough lumber. Two driveways will be constructed direct through the building from Namyay avenue to the yard, one 16 feet or more from the north end and the other 32 feet lower down. This will arrange for a pile of 16 feet flooring, etc., on either side of each drive way, a great convenience in loading. The driveways are already opened and slide doors placed in position. The ditch which formerly bridged to Namyay avenue. There will still be left about 60 feet in the south end of the building where work, mouldings, etc. A pair of small doors open through this similar to the large ones. The lean-to at the south will be divided for an office to the left and a bedroom to the right, it being the intention that the man in charge shall always be on hand.

"Cremation," its history, practice and advantages," is the title of an attractive booklet issued by the Mount Royal Cemetery Company. The book is most attractively gotten up and contains a clear statement of the case for cremation instead of burial.

Winnipeg Telegram: The funeral of Lee Sing, a wealthy Chinese merchant, passed through the city yesterday on board a private car. There were in the party forty-six Chinese, including the widow of the deceased. The Chinamen were dressed in silks and are said to be wealthy American Chinamen. The Celestials are in bond from Boston and are en route to Hong Kong, from which point the body of Lee Sing will be borne inland to be laid away in the tomb of his ancestors.

PERSONAL.

W. Barrett, of Leduc, came up on Monday.

E. Kirkpatrick came up from Leduc on Monday.

W. Sears came up from Calgary on Monday.

J. Ranton, of Winnipeg, came in on Wednesday.

A. E. Jennings, of Vermilion, was in town on Monday.

Mrs. Flintoff came in from Fort Saskatchewan on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Larue visited Fort Saskatchewan on Tuesday.

J. B. Adamson, of Fort Saskatchewan, visited town on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Hare, of Beaver Hills, were in town on Tuesday.

W. R. Mewbery, of Toronto, came up from Wetaskiwin on Monday.

Mrs. Constantine came up from Fort Saskatchewan on Wednesday.

Mrs. Sweetapple was in town from Fort Saskatchewan on Wednesday.

A TEMPERANCE RALLY.

A considerable number of temperance people attended the meeting held in the Methodist church on Monday evening under the auspices of the Epworth League.

W. H. Parsons occupied the chair and the church choir rendered several suitable selections, solos being sung by Mrs. Hockley and Mr. Cushing.

Rev. T. C. Buchanan outlined the meaning of the decision of the Privy Council in upholding the validity of the Manitoba Liquor Act and reviewed the condition of the prohibition movement throughout Canada. The progress of the movement was to him very apparent and very gratifying.

C. W. Mathers addressed the audience on the personal total abstinence phase of the question, taking as the basis of his thoughts the refusal of Daniel to fall in with the customs of Babylon.

H. C. Taylor cited and explained the various clauses of the Territorial Liquor License Ordinance, giving a great deal of useful information.

W. I. Crafts, of the Alberta Land Co., lately of South Dakota, gave an outline of the working of prohibition in that state during the past six years. The adoption of the system had been found most effective in abolishing the sale of liquor and the material condition of the people had bettered continually as a result.

PREVENTION, NOT PUNISHMENT.

Vengeance plays no part in the fulfilment of justice. The execution of a criminal is no manifestation of a public spirit of revenge. No man of sensibility can view the legal destruction of a life without feeling that sentiments of revenge have no proper part in such proceedings.

Neither is judicial retribution the main object of the infliction of capital punishment. Many forms of penalty could be devised more severe in punishment than the infliction of sudden and painless death.

The real ground of defence of the custom of legal execution is the fact that such penalty is considered to place the greatest external restraint upon the evil disposed members of the community. The purpose of the law is to overhang a crime with a penalty sufficiently terrible to repel all who consider the matter of its commission.

DEATHS.

Squarebriggs-In Mexico, Daniel Squarebriggs, formerly of New Lumbon.

A RIGHTEOUS SUSPENSION.

The suspension of John Dillon, M. P., from the Imperial House of Commons is an action deserving the commendation of all friends of decency and of all friends of Britain.

Ireland may have troubles and the management of the Boer war may have defects but no member of a British parliament should be permitted to retain his place after indulging from that place in language which would not be tolerated in any company of self-respecting men.

If the Irish members or any other class of members persist in deserting the field of open argument for the privilege of indulging in personalities and insults, the parliamentary place which now knows such class should know them no more to the end of the session.

EDMONTON BULLETIN MARCH 28th, 1902

SEASONABLE IMMIGRATION.

The severe blizzard which recently swept over Manitoba is a double surprise because of the lateness of the season and the excessive mildness of the preceding part of the winter throughout the Canadian West. While such storms are unpleasant to a supreme degree, they are not necessarily of injury to the settled farming part of the country. Indeed, a heavy fall of snow coming immediately before the spring break-up, after a winter of light snow fall, is of the greatest possible advantage in wetting the ground for the spring crop. Spring drouth is the great drawback to farming in the West, and anything that will give spring moisture is good for the crop. Snow storms have occurred in Manitoba and the west even as late as May, and while people who were faint hearted or unprepared would feel like clearing the country because of them, they were really of the greatest benefit. The first spring, the spring of clear, sunny, breezy weather, uninterupted by rain or snow during April or May, is the worst possible spring for the production of an early and good harvest. A long continued dry spring means late and puny growth, and square and late harvest, unless the conditions of summer and fall are especially favorable. Other things being equal, a stormy spring is likely to bring the best harvest.

But to the farmer who is unprepared for such emergency, either in the housing of his family or his stock, cannot help but suffer from such storms in proportion to their suddenness and severity. The settler already established, who is in that position, has frequently himself only to blame; but the new settler, the immigrant who is just coming into the country, meets in such a storm a misfortune against which he cannot fully provide and from the effects of which he is bound to suffer possibly to a very serious degree. It is a matter of deep regret to those who have the best interests of the settlement and settlers of the Northwest at heart, that so many immigrants take the heavy chances of coming into the country in the very early spring. No doubt the very fine weather of the past winter has been an inducement to this early coming, and therefore the number of immigrants caught by the storm is greater than usual. This would seem to be a suitable time to emphasize and impress the idea that there is on the average a loss and not a gain to the immigrant by coming west in the late winter or very early spring. He comes at such a time with the idea of getting on his own land in time to produce a crop the same season. The idea is creditable, but the result does not generally work out as expected. Given a uniformly fine spring such we generally have, and possibly the early comers may have some advantage; but in case of such a storm as that which has recently taken place, the new settler who faces that storm with his family, stock and effects on the train, or unboxed at his destination suffers in body and in purse to an extent that may cripple entirely his first season's operations. No matter how early the settler may come, by the time he gets his place located and is able to break land it is already late in the season to expect a fair average crop. He has been at extra expenses for feed, board and housing by coming so early; he has been in a scramble to get his land selected and get it in good time; he is always behind in his first season's work, having undertaken too much; and he possibly faces the winter without proper preparations for his family or stock and without adequate result from his late seeding, unless the season be especially favorable.

The time for the homesteader with family and stock, to come to the Northwest is in the latter half of May. Then the weather has become settled, the grass is green, his stock will feed and improve anywhere they are turned out without cost to himself or danger to them; his family can live comfortably in a tent, the country is in good condition to be travelled over, and land can be selected to the best advantage and at the smallest possible expense. There need be none of the hurry in location that is necessary if a crop is to be produced in the same season. If the homesteader has his land selected and his family located upon it sometime in June so that he can commence breaking for his next season's crop in that month—which is the month for breaking—he is in plenty of time to get a profitable crop the next year. Having finished his breaking he has plenty of time to put up hay for his flock and a house for his family, and comfortable, although possibly temporary.

outbuildings before winter sets in. He is thus ready to face the winter with all preparations made, and he has been at no cash outlay during the summer except for food actually required. To get in a full summer of his own work on his own place, doing everything to advantage and at the right time, although paying for the food he requires, is better business than working all summer at a scrambling rate on the off chance of raising a few acres of crop. It is cheaper to buy what little food he requires than to try to raise it under disadvantageous conditions. Of course his condition is vastly improved if he has a few cows to milk during the summer. This gives him a return surer and better than the crop, and makes him practically independent from the start. During the winter he is in a position to get out rails and building timber, and having put in a comfortable and profitable winter, he enters upon his second season with everything in his favor for getting a good return for his labor of the previous summer; while his neighbor who scrambled all summer, and scrambled and suffered all winter, is still scrambling when his second spring begins, and is not in as nearly a good position to secure a good return.

If all the settlers who have come to the Northwest in past years, had come in late May rather than in early April, an immense amount of suffering and loss would have been avoided and the settlers themselves would have been far further ahead to-day. It is to be hoped that with the rush of immigration now taking place and likely to continue for some years, the wiser policy will prevail. If the recent storm has an effect in emphasizing that policy, it will have done more good than harm.

The Opening of the Assembly.

(Special correspondence.)

Regina, March 21st: At three o'clock this afternoon an escort of Northwest Mounted Police, composed of some fifteen men surrounding the Lieutenant-Governor and his aide, Capt. Macdonnell, trotted smartly into the square in front of the legislative buildings. With a clatter of accoutrements and the ring of shod hoofs on half-frozen hall-bare ground, the escort, in obedience to a short word of command, swung right and lined up on the square, facing the unimposing pile wherein our legislators sit. "And draft with this care and tact an act to amend the amendment of the amended municipal act." The flag went up, the bugle rang out, the royal salute was given, and His Honor alighted and with his A. D. C. entered the legislative assembly, already crowded with the capillaries of beauty and best. So large was the assembly, and so small the hall, that the members' places and chairs were filled, compelling them to perforce range themselves along the wall. The greater numbers of the spectators were ladies. The legislative chamber is about the size of Houston's Hall, with a raised dais at one end. On this dais is the throne of the Lieutenant-Governor, and not the greatest of the fictions which surround the legislative chamber is that the throne which is a "throne" while occupied by the Lieutenant-Governor immediately becomes a chair when occupied by the speaker. Two doors open into the hall at the dais end, one on each side of the "throne-chair." From that on the right the members and supporters of the government entered, Messrs. Haultain, Seddon and Bulyea, and among them on opening day was Jack Sher, member for Victoria, who last session sat on the opposition benches. Whether his presence on the government side was by accident or design later events and votes will show. From the other door "few in numbers but stout in heart" came the opposition. Their leader, D. H. McDonald, of Fort Qu'Appelle, is a shrewd-faced business man and intently he listened to the reading of the address. Beside him stood his lieutenant, Sam McLeod, of Prince Albert, tall and handsome, with a crown of grey-black hair. Neither Messrs. Bennett nor Villeneuve were present. Not having any chairs the members of the government and opposition alike stood and leaned against the wall in positions of varying gracefulness and ease.

For a quarter of an hour the spectators waited, the Governor being in his private quarters in the other end of the building. Then the door to the left of the dais was thrown authoritatively open and Capt. Macdonnell, A. D. C. strode in and with him Commissioner Perry. Capt. Macdonnell is the possessor of a rich baritone voice which was heard to good advantage when he announced His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor. The announcement brought the spectators to their feet. His Honor, who had just entered in the high office, the Wind-off uniform. Having arrived His Honor lost no time in proceeding to business. In a clear voice, though somewhat rapidly, he read the speech from the throne, which we give in full below.

The speech concluded, His Honor bowed and withdrew. Re-entering his sleigh the bugle blew, the escort wheeled in position and clattered from the square, the flag came down and the opening function was over—the fourth session of the fourth legislative assembly was open for business.

The escort was in command of Insp. Taylor.

There are 31 members of the assembly. Their occupations are as follows:

|-----------------------|----|
| Lawyers, | 5 |
| Doctors, | 3 |
| Merchants, | 7 |
| Farmers and ranchers, | 13 |
| Brewers, | 1 |
| Bankers, | 1 |
| Postmaster, | 1 |

Something which not everyone in the Territories knows is that the table around which the members desks are seated is the old historical one around which the Fathers of Confederation sat when they drafted the resolutions which were the means of confederating Canada.

Notwithstanding the many important matters pending it is expected that but little legislation will be introduced, and it is generally thought that the session will be brief and unimportant.

About two-thirds of the members are present; the remainder are expected Monday.

Among the spectators present were Dr. Patterson, small pox expert, and John H. Wilson, manager of the Imperial Bank at Prince Albert, both well known in Edmonton.

The speech from the throne was as follows:

"It is with much pleasure that I welcome you to this the fourth session of the fourth Legislative Assembly. The time at which you meet is one characterized by great and unexampled prosperity in all sections of our country. New settlements with bright prospects are springing up in every direction, and the succession of excellent crops during recent years tends to encourage the continuation of the immigration movement so noticeable at present.

"During the month of September last the Territories were honored by the presence of Their Imperial Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, now the Prince and Princess of Wales. Every effort possible was made to make the visit pleasant and memorable, and, I am assured, Their Royal Highnesses were much gratified at the evidences of sterling loyalty shown in the numerous addresses presented by the several municipalities and other public bodies in the Territories.

"The unprecedented crop of last season brought the transportation and distribution into prominence, and demonstrated the necessity for improved and enlarged accommodation for shipping and getting grain to eastern ports and the close of lake navigation. Owing to the representations made to the Canadian Pacific authorities by my government through the Department of Agriculture the evils of the grain blockade existing a few weeks ago have been considerably mitigated by ship-masters to the north via North Port. As a result the farmers are now in receipt of an increase in prices amounting to at least ten per cent. over prices formerly obtaining.

"During the recess my government has been in communication with the Federal government upon the matters set forth in your memorial to His Excellency in council of the second day of May, 1900, and as a result a conference was held with a sub-committee of the Privy Council appointed for that purpose. In addition to verbal representations made, a statement in writing was submitted on behalf of my government. This statement together with the reply of the Federal authorities—which I regret to say has not yet been received—will be communicated to you at the earliest possible moment and you will be asked to take action with respect to the important questions dealt with therein.

"Owing to the great increase of population in the Territories provision will have to be made for increased representation in the Legislature and a measure dealing with that subject will be brought to you.

"Statements of receipts and expenditures of the past year together with estimates of the public requirements during the present year will be laid before you.

"I now leave you to your deliberations confided to you will, under Divine guidance, give your most earnest consideration to the matters brought to your attention."
